With the rise in telehealth appointments, a Parkinson’s Foundation survey sought to better understand the attitudes of people living with Parkinson’s disease (PD) on telehealth use and satisfaction.

Among the 944 survey respondents:

- Average age: 71 years old
- 83% have used telehealth at least once
- Average duration of living with PD: 7 years

Highest Satisfaction by Appointment Type

79% Speech and Language Therapy

70% Mental Health

Health Appointment Preferences

Telehealth

- Easy to use and convenient
- Reduced travel time and flexibility
- Good option for follow-up care

In-Person

- Providers can directly observe physical symptoms
- Easy to plan visits with providers
- Sight and touch helpful in person
- Personal connection was better
